

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

PUBLISHERS' NOTICE.

The University of Pennsylvania Press take pleasure in announcing that their efforts to send to the subscribers of the American Law Register the unpublished numbers of the magazine have been so far successful that they will be able to mail the numbers for November and December within three days.

The first or January number of the new and improved magazine will be in the mails on the 25th of this month.

The new magazine is under the control of the editorial committee and the editors mentioned on the fourth page of the cover of this issue. The first numbers of the magazine will contain articles by Richard C. McMurtrie, Morton P. Henry, Charles F. Beach, Jr., C. Stuart Patterson, Alfred B. Thacher, Everett P. Wheeler, Edward B. Whitney and other eminent members of the Bar of the United States.

While thus insuring the success of the department of original articles, it is by no means the intention of the editors to allow the other departments of the magazine to suffer. Great care will be given to the publication and annotation of important decisions. In this connection it may be said that of special value to the profession will be the annotation of the case involving the validity of Mr. Tilden's will, which will appear in the February number of the new magazine.

Recognizing the fact that the great mass of decisions renders it entirely out of the question for a practicing lawyer to read even the syllabus of the majority of cases decided by the Federal Courts and State Courts of last resort, the editors in the department devoted to "Recent Decisions" will endeavor to place in the hands of the practising lawyer abstracts of all important cases decided during the previous month. Besides these features each number of the new magazine will contain careful book reviews and editorial comments on events of interest to the profession.